Dora Bright (1862 – 1951)

Catalogue (@17/2/2021)

The preliminary catalogue of works by Dora Bright was prepared by ‘Maj-Britt Peters’ (?) on the basis of the Pazdérek 1904 catalogue. This was updated by Silke Wenzel in a paper under the ‘Musik und Gender im Internet’ project undertaken by the Hochschule für Musik und Theater Hamburg, and also Sophie Fuller in her PhD thesis on Women composers.

Further work reviewing digital library catalogues from across the globe, lists of works in articles and news sites, as well as contemporary websites and research, are incorporated into this listing. Items not in the previous catalogue(s) and new information regarding each work is highlighted in green, and where existing copies of works have been identified these are noted in red.

Revised and updated by Anthony Bilton.

Fantasia for Piano and Orchestra in G minor
1890 Daily Telegraph & Reporter (London) 24/10/1890 reports “The new work thus first introduced to public notice, though called a Fantasia though is more of a concerto somewhat freely constructed - played in Dresden and Koln (18/10/1890) recently. Daily Telegraph & Reporter (London) 31/10 1890 further report on Die Zeitung article relating to the DB concerts in Dresden and Koln stating “a pianoforte concerto, full of original and beautiful ideas, excellent workmanship, and very praiseworthy instrumentation, was received in the warmest manner”. The Queen 25/4/1891 reports upcoming visits to Dresden, Koln and St Petersburg – states “works include concerto in A minor, Fantasia in G minor, suite for violin and pianoforte, album of songs, several duets for two pianofortes, some pieces for flute, etc. She is engaged on an orchestral suite (three of five movements written) and a quartet for piano and strings.”

Fantasia for piano and orchestra in No. 2 in G major
1892 – G major first movement in 4/4 sonata form with cadenza leading to a short 6/8 serenata in the tonic minor and finally a rondo in G major in 2/4 time. Sheffield Independent 3/3/1892 reports “DBs Fantasia will be one of the novelties of the forthcoming season of the Philharmonic Society, is in the key of G, and is in one movement, although practically it is that of a condensed concerto. It was written on the return of DB from Germany last October, so that it is the young composers latest work.” First performance and snippets (p17) of themes in Philharmonic Society programme 5th Concert 11/5/1892 at St. James Hall London. This was mis-advertised and mis-reported as being in G Minor in many papers and the original programme, before and shortly after the concert. The Times 13/5/1892 correctly ascribes it as being in G major and the snippets published in the programme show G major for the first and last movements.

Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 2 in D minor
1892
Sophie Fuller PhD footnote - Who's Who (1913/15) and International Who's Who (1918) outlines Piano Concerto no. 2, performed in Cologne, 1892. Who’s who incorrectly ascribe the Cologne performance as a Piano Concerto - this was most likely the Fantasia no. 2 in G major as ‘written’ for the Philharmonic Society, played 11/5/1892 and subsequently performed in Cologne and with the Piano Quartet in D major in Hanover, reported in the Western Morning News 20/10/1892. The Philharmonic 5th concert programme 11/5/1892 p17 describes the fantasia in the form of a condensed concerto. There is no reference in any musical magazine or newspaper of a concert, which includes a piano concerto in D minor or mention of a second piano concerto, other than in outlines of DBs work post the Who’s Who entry. Other than in reference to the Fantasia (G major and G minor) which are described as similar to a condensed concerto.
